Organization Provides Tips for Preparing Youth for Emergencies

Emergencies and disasters can happen at any time. Disaster planning, response and recovery efforts should always consider the unique needs of children, who make up roughly a quarter of the U.S. population. That is why the Illinois Emergency Management Agency, and county emergency management agencies, are taking steps to promote youth preparedness.

Tips for incorporating children into disaster preparedness:

Promote Interactive activities within your family. One way to do this is by involving children in the development of a family emergency plan.

Use real world events to teach about emergency situations and disasters. Using media coverage of current disasters (floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, power outages), talk to children about how your family would respond if this happened to you. Using your family emergency plan, discuss where would you go, what would you do and how you will ensure their safety during an emergency.

Children who are prepared experience less anxiety and feel more confident during actual emergencies and disasters.

For younger children, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has collaborated with the American Red Cross to produce a disaster preparedness activity book, Prepare with Pedro. This booklet is designed to encourage youth and their families to be better prepared for disasters by offering safety advice alongside crosswords, coloring pages, matching games and more.

For more information about youth preparedness, please visit Ready.Illinois.gov.
